THE COUNTERFEIT COMPOUND INTEREST NOTE [illegible] the Treasury [illegible] different parts of the [illegible] of $100 which they have received [illegible] that denomination will be [illegible] The mystery [illegible] thoroughly investigated [illegible] the most dangerous counterfeit which has yet appeared and may well challenge the inspection of [illegible] the Bank Note Com[pany] [illegible] plates [illegible] whether the back is either the [illegible] an electrotype from [illegible] that either the original plates [illegible] American Bank Note Company have [illegible] into improper hands or [illegible] was obtained by the electrotype [illegible] it is difficult to [illegible] the plate from which it was [illegible] experiments in the duplication of plates by that method were [illegible] in the Treasury Building by persons [illegible] the Government at intervals before Mr. McCulloch became Secretary with a view to the adoption of the process, and [illegible] multiplication of the plates character[illegible] It is known [illegible] plates have been [illegible] at the Treasury [illegible] New York to outside parties for back [illegible] may have fallen into im[proper] [illegible] But it cannot be denied that in [illegible] of making these plates at the Treasury Department greater opportunities are [illegible] than at any other point or by any other parties.

METHODIST CHURCH SOUTH.—The St. Louis [illegible] referring to the Conference of the Methodist Church South in that city, says: The [illegible] the New Constitution have [illegible] reason to thank the Conference of the Methodist Church South which has been in session in [illegible] for several days for the public demonstration it has made. No stronger proof could be furnished of the necessity for the oath of loyalty which the New Constitution requires of preachers [illegible] Here is a religious assemblage [illegible] considerable [illegible] the war is closed and we [illegible] say that there has been no more [illegible] in this State without [illegible] together with arms in their hands [illegible] Legislature fled in terror from [illegible] City at the mention of Lyon's name. This conference appeared to be made up of men who could speak of their crimes without so much as bringing a blush to their cheeks. They talked of their participation in the rebellion with the utmost complacency, and members of their [illegible] eulogized and complimented [illegible] conduct which according to the laws of the land exposed them to the penitentiary or the gallows. [illegible] sentiment was uttered. On the contrary, their whole proceedings were marked with an undisguised and unblushing approbation [illegible] which to the eyes of loyal men [illegible] decency. It would be vain to talk [illegible] of the men composing that body being penitent. They seemed rather to glory in their shame and guilt. All the scourging they had received appears [illegible] as in the case of Pharoah of old [illegible] have hardened their hearts.

THE NILE.—Sir Roderick Murchison has published a letter from Samuel Baker, the Nile explorer, who writes under date of Khartoum, June 21st:

"I [illegible] map published by Miani in opposition [illegible] Speke and Grant. It is a childish production [illegible] and it is a rare example of [illegible] and [illegible] and presumption with a small amount of imposture. The man was unprovided with instruments [illegible] totally incapable of astronomical observation. He never went beyond north latitude three degrees thirty [illegible] minutes, but he has marked his limit [illegible] In latitude [illegible] three degrees thirty two minutes, he cut his name upon a tamarind tree [illegible] now bears the name [illegible] 'Traveler's Tree' [illegible] Within two miles of that tree, I [illegible] the night at observations of various stars, and [illegible] exact position. Thus I can well support Speke [illegible] and map I have found perfectly correct. I have worked hard and determinedly to win what [illegible] during two [illegible] to reach the sources of the Nile from the west. In this work I have spared neither purse nor [illegible]

"[illegible] I have learnt the sad news of poor Speke's death. I had looked forward with much pleasure to meeting him again. He and I planned the expedition [illegible] and he would have re[joiced] [illegible] my success.

"There [illegible] mystery connected with the Nile [illegible] expedition on that head [illegible] the great lake that I have discovered, the Albert Nyanza. This can only be done by [illegible] on the lake.

"I shall not undertake another expedition in Africa. [illegible] years I have not had one day of enjoyment [illegible] difficulties, fatigue and fever."

[illegible] INDIANS.—It is pretty certain that the [illegible] on John Day's River were [illegible] Indians from the Umatilla Reservation. At different times these Indians have been [illegible] stealing horses on the road and [illegible] the Warm Springs Reservation have been guilty of similar offenses. These things [illegible] infested by the hostile Snakes [illegible] stopped by the military and Indian Agents, the whites who are injured by them will be compelled to go [illegible] killing them. The thieves who stole the horses on John Day have gone up into the mountains on Crooked River, where they have a hiding place. The remedy for the whole matter is plain. The Agents have the power [illegible] those Indians in, and should be [illegible] doing so at once. The field would then be left clear for the military authorities and [illegible] Every Indian then found at large could be exterminated with the certainty that he had met a deserved fate. If this is not done some inoffensive Indian is likely to be killed for the crimes of so-called friendly Indians. —[illegible]

DEATH OF MADAM KOSSUTH.—The wife of Gov. Kossuth, the illustrious Hungarian patriot, died on September 1st, at Turin, of the illness from which she has been suffering for years. On account of her failing health her husband several years ago repaired with her to Italy, where she has [illegible] with the most exemplary [illegible] Madam Kossuth at the time [illegible] years [illegible] Her remains are [illegible] by the side [illegible] only a few years [illegible] during the last two years lost [illegible] and the death of his wife [illegible] will [illegible] the deepest sympathy with the intrepid [illegible]

THE FORM OF A PARDON [illegible] PRESIDENT.—The following [illegible] granted by the President [illegible] for the amnesty proclamation:

ANDREW JOHNSON,

PRESIDENT OF THE UNITED STATES OF AMERICA,

[illegible]

WHEREAS, [illegible] by taking part in the [illegible] Government of the United States [illegible] liable to heavy pains and penalties;

AND WHEREAS, The circumstances of his case render him a proper object of Executive clemency;

Now, therefore, be it known, that I, Andrew Johnson, President of the United States of America, in consideration of the premises, divers [illegible] and sufficient reasons me thereunto moving, do hereby grant to the said [illegible] a full pardon and amnesty for all offenses by him committed, arising from participation, direct or implied, in the said rebellion, conditioned as follows, namely: This pardon to begin and take effect from the day on which the said [illegible] shall take the oath prescribed in the Proclamation of the President dated May 29, 1865, and to be void and of no effect if the said [illegible] shall hereafter at any time acquire any property whatever in slaves or make use of slave labor, and that he first pay all costs which may have accrued in any proceeding [illegible] instituted against his person or property.

And upon the further condition that the said [illegible] shall notify the Secretary of State in writing that he has received and accepted the foregoing pardon.

In testimony whereof, I have hereunto signed my name and caused the seal of

ANDREW JOHNSON.

WM. H. SEWARD,
Secretary of State.

THE REMAINS OF GENERAL WRIGHT.—The Humboldt Times of October 7th gives the following particulars concerning the finding of the body of General Wright:

The following is the substance of the statement made by Cunningham and Thompson before Justice Conklin, of Mattole, concerning the finding of the remains above mentioned: On their way up the coast from Shelter Cove to the Mattole Valley on the 27th day of September last, about seventeen miles below the valley, and at the upper end of what is known as Big Flat, they discovered the remains of a human body just washed ashore. The body appeared to be that of a large man and advanced in years. The right arm and shoulder blade were gone; the left one was also gone, but the shoulder blade was still attached to the body. The body was so badly decomposed that the features were not recognizable. It had on a pair of fine, dark blue broadcloth pants, such as military officers are accustomed to wear; the suspenders, with the buckles, were attached to the pants; also a pair of white flannel drawers, a pair of fashionable boots, No. 9, and nailed. The boots were partly covered with barnacles, as were the pants, showing evidently that the body had been a long time in the water. The remains were buried near where found. Every article found on the body has been carefully preserved for future identification, and is in the possession of Thompson. Another correspondent writing from Mattole, referring to the fact of the recovery of the body, says that on some portion of the clothing taken from it was marked the name of "G. Wright," thus proving beyond a reasonable doubt that it was that of General Wright.

The continental system of having no fences is evidently the best. Small enclosures are going out of vogue. In England some of the best counties have uprooted many hedges and formed large fields. And here, instead of repairing so many fences, we should see what fences we could dispense with, thus spoiling a harboring place for weeds, and thus save much time, during the year, in not having to turn about so often; also saving the expense of rails. Dispensing with fences, almost entirely, is strongly advocated as being a great convenience. It is believed the time will come when the absence of fences will be deemed a sign of a progressive farmer.

Fort Pulaski, with its frowning parapets lined with the savage dogs of war, is at present a place of considerable interest, containing within its battered, war-begrimed, historic walls, several distinguished prisoners of the late Confederate States. Among the prominent men now confined there are Gov. Magrath, of South Carolina, G. A. Trenholm, late Secretary of the Treasury of the defunct Confederacy, D. L. Yulee, of Florida, Secretary Seddon, Judge Campbell, General Mercer and others.

PARDONS GRANTED.—Fayette McMullen, of Virginia, formerly Governor of Washington Territory, was pardoned by the President September 21st. Joseph R. Anderson, of the famous Tredegar Iron works in Virginia, has also been pardoned. He belonged to three of the exempted classes, having graduated at West Point, having been a rebel general, and being worth over $20,000.

The notices of property libelled for confiscation occupy thirty two columns in the Richmond Republic. The list includes about two hundred estates.

OFFICIAL PAPER OF THE STATE

THURSDAY MORNING, OCTOBER 26, 1865.

The Inharmonious

Every reader and observer among us must be struck with the contrast that exists between "Democratic principles" as enunciated and expounded at the East and the same somewhat indefinable and unexplainable sophisms as proclaimed by the "regular leaders" in Oregon. The Copperhead organs point with great glee to differences in feeling, sentiment and policy, which they assert exist between Union men in this State and elsewhere, but it does not fall within their province to tell their readers that the "Democracy" they boast of is utterly at variance with itself in all parts of the country. Frequent and great are the efforts which have been made by the politicians to harmonize and unite the discordant party, but at every effort the result they seek is found to be further from its realization than ever before. The party at present is governed by no leading idea or principle. Its national organization is entirely lost. It suits the issues it makes and the platforms it adopts, to a State or locality merely, instead of assuming a position which gives a party a consistent bearing, and which indicates that it is guided by a general and well established policy. In some of the States, as Maine, New York and Iowa, the party professes to be in favor of the ratification of the Constitutional Amendment, and eulogizes President Johnson and his reconstruction policy. In other States, as Indiana, New Jersey, California and Oregon, the same party vehemently opposes the abolition of slavery, denounces the President, calls for the liberation of imprisoned traitors, inveighs against every measure which the Government has lately adopted, and in all respects acts just as it did during the war. In Oregon, in particular, the leading men of the party are extremely hostile to the President and to the course he is pursuing. They will not be beguiled into supporting him. Some of them assert that they prefer defeat under their former (secession) principles, rather than to yield as others have done. The indications are very plain that in the canvass of next year the "Democracy," of Oregon will re-affirm their old doctrines, and not come squarely around upon the opposite side, as was recently done by the party in New York.

Fearing lest an effort may be made to induce the faithful of the old party in Oregon to give up secession principles, disown the traditions and the treasonable record of the past and make an attempt to begin anew,—free, as possible from the odium that clings to them, two of the principal Copperhead papers of the State are appealing to the "Democracy," beseeching them to stand firm. President Johnson has been endorsed by the "Democrats" at the East, but, say O'Meara and Malone, "let not the Democrats of Oregon give him any manifestation of their approbation." Says the State Rights Democrat, "Mr. Johnson can never again be the accepted, recognized leader of the Democracy." Now in view of the fact that the President spurned the party long ago, and that he is not indebted to it for the office he holds, this expression comes with a wonderful degree of coolness. We will quote further from the Democrat:

If it is to replace himself in the affections and confidence of the Democratic party that President Johnson is pursuing his present policy towards the Southern States, he will most signally fail. The great mass of the Democrats all over the Union will not again receive and repose faith in the man who sought to make himself foremost and most notorious in the days of wildest license among the many odious and infamous public men who bent all their energies to the destruction of the republican form of government the Revolutionary fathers founded, and who alike violated and trampled upon the Constitution and laws and outraged every impulse of humanity, right and justice, both towards their countrymen in the South and their brethren in the North.

In connection with this savage impeachment of President Johnson it is somewhat edifying to read the resolutions of the New York "Democratic" Convention. That body resolved that it had the "highest faith in the integrity and patriotism of Andrew Johnson." They sought to take the President by stealth from the company of his friends and appropriate him thereafter entirely to themselves. From the many laudations of Mr. Johnson which the New York World, the leading "Democratic" paper in the country, publishes, one might conclude that that journal was his especial organ, and that the President was, not an Abolitionist, but a model "Democrat."

The Oregon Reporter protests against the endorsement of the President by the Oregon "Democracy" in the manner in which it was done in New York. The Reporter uses the following language:

> Assuming that the party places itself under his leadership, it would naturally follow that those doctrines which heretofore prevented the co-operation of the President with the Democratic party would have to be surrendered. The party, by that surrender, would acknowledge that the principles which it has heretofore maintained are false, that the energetic protests it has entered, from time to time, against the growing encroachments of Federal power—the issue of a depreciated currency, the extravagance and corruption of the President's friends in power, and the military murders of his illegal Commissions, were false in point of fact, untrue in principle, and a fraud upon the public.

These utterances are made for the purpose of keeping the courage of the faithful, in this hour of defection and defeat, up to the sticking point. The "regular Democrats" of Oregon are resolved not to yield as their brethren elsewhere have done. Secessionists at the beginning, they remain so still. They count largely upon the numbers of those who have come into the State the present year, and think that with their aid, their victory in the next election will be an easy one. Hence they will not disband the old party according to the example of others, nor come out with a new set of "Principles" "ready made" for the occasion and the times. The Oregon "Democracy," it must be owned, are more consistent than their associates elsewhere, but hardly so wise as others. We have no doubt but there will be an effort next spring, to cause an abandonment of hard shell principles by the party in Oregon, but it will not be likely to succeed. The Copperheads here may be expected to advocate Confederate principles for some time yet, and not soon show the white feather as their Eastern brethren have done.

The Confederate Democrat says that the rebels who are in prison "have committed no offense, are guilty of no crime." These poor inoffensive lambs whom "the butcher Stanton," as the Democrat calls him, is charged with putting to the severest and most inhuman torture, will be glad to learn that their innocence is believed in by a fellow mourner of the Confederacy, who from his home beyond the mountains in one of Oregon's valleys, gives utterance to the great grief that wrings his heart because of the injustice of a people toward those who but lately tried to destroy them all and who in the effort to do so, starved tens of thousands of our captive brothers. We know the Democrat is grieved at the prospect of these murderers meeting the death of felons. Yet who can wonder at its unhappiness? Champ Ferguson is dead—we shall hear a long screech of agony for him. Wirtz will come next. The Democrat's friends are just now in an unhappy situation. Its grief is perhaps natural, in charity we will also consider it sincere.

CLACKAMAS COUNTY.—We learn that A. Warner, of Oregon City, has been nominated as the Union candidate for the Legislature from Clackamas county. The nomination is a good one and Mr. Warner will be elected. The special election will be held on Monday, the 20th of November.

[DISPATCHES TO THE OREGONIAN.]

DATES TO OCTOBER [illegible]

Further from Raleigh

NEW YORK, Oct. 22.—The Herald's Raleigh correspondent says of the North Carolina Convention that a singular announcement was made by the chairman to the effect that after diligent search he was unable to procure a national flag to place over the capitol and had to send to New York for one.

Nothing but the timely receipt of a telegram from President Johnson [illegible] that North Carolina should at once [illegible] every dollar of indebtedness contracted to assist the rebellion prevented the staving [illegible] ignoring that debt. They had their plans very adroitly laid for the purpose, but on reading the President's dispatch the ordinance was moved [illegible] ately taken up and passed amid cheering and great enthusiasm, and a few negative votes. The proposed amendment to submit it to the people was not adopted.

An ordinance was passed for the organization in some counties of a militia force to suppress outlawry. It [illegible] the appointment of the national military officers.

Resolutions were [illegible] requesting the President to restore the people of North Carolina to all their constitutional rights, to remove the military and transfer civilian prisoners to the civil authorities.

The President's Opinions.

NEW YORK, Oct. 22.—The substance of the President's remarks on the subject of the reconstruction of the Southern States during the late interview with him, has been given with the President's approval by Major General Stearns of Massachusetts. In reply to a remark that the Democrats claimed that he had gone over to them, he intimated that the Democrats discovered that he was in advance of them, and was now trying to come up to his standard. He hoped they would succeed in doing so. He reiterates his doctrine that notwithstanding the so-called secession of the Southern States they were never out of the Union, but that by their rebellious course they had forced the civil government [illegible] the machinery of which, as [illegible] he considers the chief duty of the time. This he says cannot be done in a moment, but such great and happy progress is being made in it that the results sometimes appear to him like a dream. He did not expect forever to deprive them of their former civil rights, even the majority of those excluded in the amnesty proclamation, but intended they should ask for pardon and thus realize the enormity of their crimes. He is in favor of allowing negroes who served in the army, and those who can read and write, and those possessed of either qualification, to vote, but he does not think it is policy, or that he has the right to force those conditions on the whites of the South, though he believes he will, by [illegible] concede this privilege to the freedmen. The President also favors the basing of representation in Congress on the number of qualified voters instead of on the population as at present.

South Carolina Election—Strife Between the Whites and Blacks.

NEW YORK, October 22.—The Herald has Charleston dates to October [illegible] the day of election. South Carolina [illegible] The address expresses the belief that the destruction of slavery will ultimately prove a great benefit to all the people of the State and especially to working men, as it will tend to free them from the monopoly of capital and dignity of labor.

The hostile attitude towards each other of the two parties in South Carolina, of the whites and blacks, [illegible] assuming a phase threatening serious results unless the difficulties shall be rapidly adjusted. [illegible] where negroes have been settled [illegible] plantations subject to the [illegible] of the Freedmen's Bureau. The planters who now find [illegible] combined—are anxious to regain possession of those lands, allege that the freedmen are allowing them to go to ruin. They [illegible] for their own [illegible] neglecting preparations for next year's crops and refuse to give up possession.

The white South Carolinians are [illegible] against the Freedmen's Bureau officers, whom they charge with encouraging the negroes in their assumption.

It is principally with the object of endeavoring to end just these difficulties that General Howard, Commissioner of the Freedmen's Bureau, is now on his way to South Carolina. The General arrived at Charleston on Tuesday last by the overland route from Raleigh, N. C., and left next day for Columbia, to have an interview with Governor Perry. It is expected that on his return to Charleston he will deliver an address to the citizens.

A disastrous fire attended with loss of life, occurred at Charleston last Wednesday. It was in the business part of the city, [illegible] manufacturing establishments and the Courier newspaper office. The loss is estimated at $500,000. From thirty to forty persons were [illegible] fifteen to twenty of whom it is thought were instantly killed. Others were extricated in a dreadfully injured and suffering state.

The Fenian Congress—John Mitchell Released.

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 21.—In the Fenian Congress to-day communications on government, constitution, military affairs and finance were reported. The reports were accepted, and on motion were taken up section by section for adoption. In the afternoon, the President of the Congress announced that [illegible] delegate from Missouri, who [illegible] John Mitchell was present. This announcement electrified the Congress. Three cheers were given for President Johnson, three for the United States, three for [illegible] and three for John Mitchell. [illegible] the cheering ceased. Every member of the Congress [illegible] in the most earnest manner. When the cheering had in some manner subsided, it was moved and seconded that the Secretary of the [illegible] of the [illegible] Mitchell. The motion was unanimously carried. In the evening, after some discussion, the report of the committee with some amendments, was adopted. An Irish banner was presented to the Chairman by [illegible] delegates. The Congress adjourned until Monday. The session will continue until Wednesday [illegible]

California News.

SAN FRANCISCO, Oct. 2[illegible].—The Pacific Mail Steamship Company propose to shorten the schedule time of their through line between San Francisco and New York to twenty one or twenty one and a half days, under the new arrangement which goes into effect the first of November. The time between this port and Panama is to be lessened. Reduction in the through trip is to be effected by making the time on the Atlantic side inside of eight days. We learn from New York that Ben Holladay has recently organized a joint stock company to take shares of his steamship business on the Pacific coast. The new organization is to be known as the California, Oregon and Mexican Mail Steamship Company, and to have a capital stock of $2,000,000, of which Mr. Holladay retains two thirds, the remainder being taken by the other directors. The Board is composed as follows: Paul S. Forbes, the principal ship owner of New York; John Bell, jr., Samuel S. Barlow, Capt. Wm. Dall, of California, John J. Russel and Ben Holladay. The company have already purchased the side wheel steamer Oceanus, now supposed to be on her way to this port from China. This vessel is quite new and is of the same size as the Sierra Nevada, with a less draught of water, and said to be very fast. Another vessel of the same character is to be built by the company immediately at New York.

Mrs. Mary Baldwin, the aged lady who cut her throat with a razor a few days since, died last evening of her self-inflicted injuries. Her daughter with four young children arrived here by the Colorado yesterday.

A meeting of the workmen engaged in different branches of manufacturing machinery have called a meeting for Friday evening next, at Hashaway Hall, to protest against a repeal of the specific contract law and endorse the report of the Chamber of Commerce on the same.

L. E. Gray, Assessor, San Francisco, Cal.

[illegible] we witnessed the [illegible] of the Nicolson pavement [illegible] First and Morrison. A few holes burnt through [illegible] by the asphaltum heat [illegible] the sink at the corner [illegible] By the bad condition of a sewer [illegible] when this city can boast [illegible] creation. The Nicolson [illegible] luxury, and so far we have [illegible] in its durability. We believe [illegible] style of [illegible] for streets ever [illegible] mud-hold, can be invented. It is [illegible] (like a sewing machine,) and has that which should characterize a wealthy and [illegible] It is very doubtful whether any more of [illegible] will be put down in Portland [illegible] opposition to it—but it is immaterial to us [illegible] see the street work progress and are willing [illegible] for anything, so it is done. Front street now presents a beautiful appearance—or will when the ragged [illegible] awnings are removed—and our people [illegible] of it. The McAdam part of the street [illegible] worked down in the center, but in [illegible] what it should be some work is necessary [illegible] out on the street. The center should be [illegible] and driven aside on each side. We presume [illegible] Street Commissioner will attend to th[illegible] also recover [illegible] the removal of all awning [illegible] matter of patching up old sidewalks has been [illegible] and in some places the street looks [illegible] of it. We do not like to accuse any one [illegible] in this matter, but it appears that partiality [illegible] to the prejudice of the "uniform appearance" prescribed by the Ordinance authorizing the work.

[illegible] Columbian Engine Company.—In the [illegible] bill of relief for Columbian Engine Company [illegible] by us on Tuesday morning, Foreman [illegible] for publication. It is not [illegible] detrimental to this [illegible] in the Department and we are [illegible] the matter. Mr. Young says [illegible] are as follows: The Common [illegible] committee on fire and water, order [illegible] for an engine house without naming [illegible] was anticipated to spend in its [illegible] The plan was accepted and an ordinance passed [illegible] $6,000 for the building of the house, [illegible] were invited for its erection—and not until [illegible] whether the cost thereof would be one [illegible] dollars. During the pendency of the [illegible] receiving of bids, contractors were consulted [illegible] ascertained that the cost of the building [illegible] seven thousand dollars, consequently no [illegible] the job at a loss of one thousand or more [illegible] for fall weather being far spent, the [illegible] the utter impossibility of erecting a house [illegible] action was had, pro[illegible] Burton to send in a bid at six thousand [illegible] of the appropriation, granting him [illegible] sum of five hundred dollars from the com[illegible] accordingly done, the house built, and [illegible] and we take pride in [illegible] the city or its citizens are asham[illegible] The bills spoken of are not for [illegible] none ever was asked [illegible] was made by the Council [illegible] that the company would not [illegible] but on the contrary it was positively [illegible] the committee on fire and water, the Chief [illegible] that the city would be paid [illegible] viz: $500.

[illegible] Bachelder has decided that in [illegible] very liberal patronage he has re[illegible] he will give four more exhibi[illegible] tableaux at Willamette Theatre, [illegible] evening, and Saturday of [illegible] The dress circle has not, so far, [illegible] the applicants to that part of the [illegible] to add the new attrac[illegible] in the advertisement this morning of [illegible] to obtain a full audience [illegible] sufficient, but we presume [illegible] to give the audience some testimo[illegible] of their patronage. Among the [illegible] this evening are enumerated a [illegible] valued at $24; one large full gilt [illegible] Bible, valued at $15, and a choice of [illegible] Byron's, Milton's and Scott's works at [illegible] three other gifts of merit. The box [illegible] today as usual, when seats can be [illegible] of the three evening exhibitions.

A Success.—The Fair lately held [illegible] for the benefit of the Catholic Orphans' [illegible] we are informed, was a complete success.

The vote in California at the late Judicial election was very light throughout the entire State. In twenty-five counties from which partial returns have come in, Sanderson's (Union) majority is [illegible] four and five thousand. The San Fran[illegible] estimate his entire majority in the [illegible] eight to ten thousand.

[illegible] Union.—This journal has been sold by its former proprietors and is now conducted as a Copperhead organ. It should by all means change its name.

The [illegible] opposes negro suffrage to keep the negro from becoming their equal. Sensible—[illegible] politicians are in danger.

[illegible] roll of Linn shows that the [illegible] in that county is nearly two and a half millions [illegible]

Among the many incidents [illegible] following: A gentleman from Napa [illegible] daughters passengers on board the steamer [illegible] she went down [illegible] after hearing of the disaster hoping to obtain some intelligence of his missing children. For nearly two weeks he was in search [illegible] to procure their bodies. During this time he scarcely ate or slept. Frequently after retiring [illegible] would after tossing about [illegible] get up and walk his room for hours. But so far the ruthless waves have refused to yield up [illegible]

Our informant tells that [illegible] have been buried at Crescent City. Of these only one [illegible] have been recognized. None of the remainder have been claimed.

A New Planet.—On the 25th of Aug. [illegible] was discovered by Dr. [illegible] at the Observatory of Bilk, Germany. It appeared as a star of the tenth magnitude, and was situated in Right Ascension 22 hours 44 minutes, and south declination 14 [illegible] minutes. This planet is the 84th of the group of small bodies now lying between the orbits of Mars and Jupiter, and is the 14th detected by Dr. Luther. During a period of less than twenty years [illegible] small planets, ranging from the 7th to [illegible] magnitude, have been detected [illegible] these minute bodies [illegible] visible in the most powerful telescopes [illegible]

Here he is.—Johnson was recently talking [illegible] here in the presence of [illegible] them finally interrupted him and told him he would not talk so in Washington. Mr. Johnson [illegible] pardoned by the President and [illegible] would prevent him from expressing [illegible] The gentleman replied that he did know the power [illegible] could prevent him [illegible] the presence and strength of a loyal man [illegible] tremble in his presence. The Offense of Rank.—We hold it inexcusable in any person, male or female, when they subject us to an annoyance which a very little [illegible] on their part would obviate. Especially is this the case where the unfortunate possessor of a bad breath will persist in button holing and intruding his views upon us to our mental and physical discomfort. If these good people would use the Sozodont it would not only render them acceptable acquaintances but would at once greatly improve their teeth and breath.

The Haunted Ship

(The following narrative is from Washington Irving, but as it is not included in his collected works it must be new to most of our readers)

The world abounds with ghost stories but it is exceedingly difficult to get them at first hand—that is to say, from persons who have actually seen the ghosts this may be the reason why they have fallen into discredit with the dubious I once, however heard a story of the kind from one who came within an ace of being an eye-witness and who believed in it most honestly He was a worthy Captain of the sea, a native either of Nantucket or Martha's Vineyard, I forget which, at any rate, a place noted for its breed of hardy mariners. I met with him in the ancient city of Seville having anchored with his brig in the Guadalquiver, in the course of a wandering voyage Our conversation one day turned upon the wonders and adventures of the sea when he informed me that, among his multifarious cruisings, he had once made a voyage on board of a haunted ship It was a vessel that had been met with, drifting, half dismantled, and with flagging sails, about the sea near the Gulf of Florida, between the main land and the Bahama Banks Those who boarded her found her without a living soul on board the hatchways were broken open, the cargo had been rifled, the decks fore and aft were covered with blood, the shrouds and rigging were smeared with the same, as if some wretched beings had been massacred as they clung to them It was evident that the ship had been plundered by pirates, and, to all appearance, the crew had been murdered and thrown overboard

The ship was taken possession of by the finders, and brought to Boston, in New England, but the sailors who navigated her to port declared they would not make such another voyage for all the wealth of Peru They had been harassed the whole way by the ghosts of the murdered crew who at night would come up out of the companion-way and the forecastle, run up the shrouds station themselves on the yards and at the mast heads, and appear to perform all the duties of the ship

As no harm had resulted from this ghostly seamanship, the story was treated lightly, and the vessel was fitted out for another voyage, but when ready for sea, no sailors could be got to embark in her She lay for some time in Boston harbor, regarded by the superstitious seamen as a fated ship; and there she might have rotted, had not the worthy Captain who related to me the story, undertaken to command her. He succeeded in getting some hardy tars, who stood less in awe of ghosts, to accompany him, and his brother-in-law sailed with him as chief mate

When they got fairly to sea, the hobgoblin crew began to play their pranks At night there would be the deuce to pay in the hold such racketing and rummaging, as if the whole cargo was overhauled, bales tumbled about and boxes broken open, and sometimes it seemed as if all the ballast was shifted from side to side. All this was heard with dismay by the sailors, and even the Captain's brother-in-law, who appears to have been a very sagacious man, was exceedingly troubled at it. As to the Captain himself, he honestly confessed to me that he never saw or heard anything, but then he slept soundly, and when once asleep, was hard to be awakened

Notwithstanding all these vagaries, the ship arrived safely at the destined end of her voyage, which was one of the South American rivers under the line. The Captain proposed to go in his boat to a town some distance up the river, leaving his ship in charge of his brother in law The latter said he would anchor her opposite to an island in the river, where he could go on shore at night, and yet be on hand to keep guard upon her, but nothing should tempt him to sleep on board The crew all swore the same The Captain could not reasonably object to such an arrangement; so the ship was anchored opposite to the island, and the Captain departed on his expedition.

For a time all went well, the brother-in-law and his sagacious comrades regularly abandoned the ship at nightfall and slept on shore, the ghosts then took command, and the ship remained as quietly at anchor as though she had been manned by living bodies instead of hobgoblin spirits One night, however, the Captain's brother-in-law was awakened by a tremendous storm He hastened to the shore The sea was lashed up in foaming surges, the rain came down in torrents; the lightnings flashed, the thunders bellowed It was one of those sudden tempests only known in the tropics. The brother in law cast a rueful look at the poor tossing, laboring ship He saw numbers of uncouth beings busy about her, who were only to be descried by the flashes of lightning or by pale fires that glided about the rigging. he heard occasionally the piping of a boatswain's whistle, or the bellowing of a hoarse voice through a speaking trumpet The ghosts were evidently trying to save the ship, but a tropical storm is sometimes an overmatch for ghost, or goblin, or even the d——l himself. In a word, the ship parted her cables, drove before the wind, stranded on the rocks, and there she laid her bones.

When the Captain returned from his expedition up the river, he found his late gallant vessel a mere hulk and received this wonderful account of her fate from his sagacious brother-in-law Whether the wreck continued to be haunted or not, he could not inform me, and I forgot to ask whether the owners recovered anything from the underwriters, who rarely insure against accidents from ghosts.

Such is one of the nearest chances I have ever had of getting to the fountain head of a ghost story I have often since regretted the Captain should have been so sound a sleeper and that I did not see his brother in law

[illegible] Disappointed [illegible] Dr [illegible]

Discovery [illegible] Danish Queen This following bit of antiquarian news is from the West Sussex (England) Gazette of recent date

The most interesting archeological discovery which has ever been made in this neighborhood took place in the church of Bosham a few days since In consequence of [illegible] excavations were made [illegible] the church which [illegible] aisle separating the nave from the aisles. In laying bare this [illegible] it was thought advisable to [illegible] in front of the arch that tradition has uniformly stated that the youthful daughter of the Danish king Canute was buried Just below [illegible] of the old [illegible] Carefully the excavation was carried [illegible] it was found, as already had been [illegible] that this stone covered a small stone coffin Every care was taken and the coffin was afterwards opened in the presence of the Rev Henry Mitchell, F S A (the vicar of Bosham), his son Henry, Mr [illegible] Sturges Jones (surgeon of Chichester) and Mr Edgar J Varley an artist of some note As soon as the lid which was seven inches thick, was raised the form of a child could be distinctly seen The figure was three feet nine inches in height so that probably the child was not more than [illegible] years old The head had been placed by the side of the body the bones although reduced to a white dust could be clearly traced The measurement of the coffin was four feet three inches by fourteen and one half inches in width at the breast, thirteen inches at the head, and ten inches at the foot No jewelry nor anything of the sort was found probably the child was too young to be buried with any personal ornaments about her This extraordinary discovery fully confirms the tradition that this was the daughter of Canute the form and plainness of the coffin furnishing additional proofs

As Aliment for Man [illegible] American agriculture is [illegible] fertilizers [illegible] comparatively few farmers appreciate the value of manure In multitudes of instances the great object appears to be to get rid of it at the least expense and trouble But such management is decidedly wrong Everything of a manurial character should be saved and applied to the soil The droppings of those horses that subsist chiefly on grain are far more valuable than if they were fed grass or hay only The ordure of neat cattle should be collected and deposited where rain will not wash it away or drying winds or sunshine dissipate it The fertilizing material of sheep folds is more valuable to a farmer than a mine of golden ore The droppings of fatten[illegible] sheep when fed with Indian corn and oil meal will [illegible] heavy crops of grass or any kind of cereal grain or roots, if the soil is well cultivated The litter of the hennery, of the dove cote of the goosery, duckery, and turkey roost if composted with a little muck, will often be more valuable, pound for pound for prompting the growth of grain roots and flowers, than the best adulterated guano that can be obtained Some chemists have assumed that if a [illegible] [illegible] one hundred men with food were in a fair state of fertility the fecal matter of those men, if carefully husbanded, would reproduce an ample supply for them, from year to year without any other manure Prof Johnson affirms that it will produce more than the food consumed There are often several barrels of soap used in some families After it has passed through the wash tub, it is in a better condition to make plants grow than before it was diluted Every barrel of good soap is worth not less than $2 for fertilizing the soil for roots grain or grass, and grapes and other fruit

Mulching Pear Trees —The pear tree abstracts from the soil a very large amount of water, parting with it at the surface of its leaves, depositing during its passage the matter held in solution to form tree, fruit, etc. We have all noticed that a continuous stream of lukewarm water soon causes the substance on which it falls to become much heated; and thus in summer the sun falling on the earth around a pear tree naturally gives to its water a large amount of heat Although owing to the small amount of such water which would comparatively pass into other kinds of trees they might not be injured yet with the pear tree the quantity is so large that it stiffens the vegetable albumen of the sap, from the great accumulation of heat, and prevents the easy and natural flow to the terminal of the tree, causing summer blight etc All this is easily prevented, by a slight mulching It should be remembered, however, before severe weather in the fall that the mulch should be drawn away from the tree and not restored until the tree has parted with its leaves When this is neglected, the pear tree will continue to take up water during its late growth, which frequently deposits itself between the tree and the bark, thus causing loose bark winter blight, etc When the growth however, is arrested by the removal of the mulch, the capillary attraction is less active at an earlier date thus the tree is protected —Working Farmer
